Puyallup Tribe Land into Trust Act passes House; congressman calls it 'game changer' for Tribe's economic development

By Puyallup Tribal News staff

In a historic vote, the U.S. House of Representatives voted 400 to 15 on April 11 to send the Puyallup Land into Trust Confirmation Act to President Joe Biden's desk for signature.

The bipartisan bill would correct an absurd consequence of the decades of pollution brought to ancestral Puyallup lands.

Putting land into trust with the federal government brings benefits to the Tribe, but any such land has to be in virtually pristine condition. The burden of cleaning the land to date has fallen on the Tribe. The Land into Trust legislation addresses that as the Tribe is diversifying its economy and specifically deals with the Tribe's new Ruston Way property – which is home to The Ram and the future Woven restaurant – and its port property.

Chairman Bill Sterud thanked members of the Washington delegation for bringing the bill through Congress.

"I want to thank Senator Cantwell, Senator Murray, Congresswoman Strickland, and Congressman Kilmer for their tireless support of the Puyallup Tribe and their work on the Puyallup Land into Trust Confirmation Act, S. 382," Chairman Sterud said in a prepared statement. "This Act will restore the Tribe's place along Commencement Bay and will expand the Tribe's presence along the Blair Waterway. It is truly historic for the Tribe. I also want to thank the leadership of both the House Natural Resources Committee and the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. This legislation is truly bipartisan and represents the best of our Nation. The Puyallup Tribe looks forward to working with our partners to continue contributing to the region's economy in exciting ways, and this legislation is a key part of these plans."

During the floor debate, Rep. Derek Kilmer spoke of the bill as a "restoration of the Tribe's ancestral homeland" and emphasized the economic benefits to the entire region.

(Top) Chairman Bill Sterud visited U.S. Congressman Derek Kilmer and U.S. Senator Maria Cantwell after the Puyallup Tribe Land Into Trust bill, which they championed, passed. (Bottom) Members of Tribal Council at the Puyallup Tribal Air Terminal, located on Ruston Way property impacted by the legislation.

"When we introduced this bill, I pointed out that this legislation will help restore the Tribe's homelands, ensuring the Tribe can continue to diversify and grow economic opportunities and create jobs across our region," Kilmer said, as recorded in the Congressional Record. "I stand by those words today, committed to ensuring that the Federal Government upholds its trust and treaty obligations. In his own words, Chairman Sterud believes that the Land into Trust Act will help the Tribe diversify its economy and bring critical infrastructure and business to the Tribe's port development and the entire region. In other words, this is a game changer for the Puyallup Tribe."

"In Washington State, this proposal has garnered widespread support not only from within the Tribe, but also from the city of Tacoma, from Pierce County, from Washington Governor Jay Inslee, and the team at the Port of Tacoma," Kilmer said. "This broad base of community support underscores the mutual benefits anticipated from this action, benefits that will surely extend well beyond the boundaries of the land in question, fostering a more vibrant, healthy, and economically robust Puget Sound region."

Easter Bunny makes appearance at March Elders Luncheon

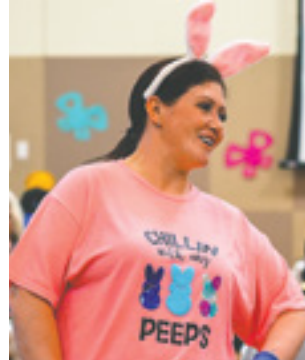

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

The House of Respect was decorated with an Easter theme on March 22 for the monthly Elders Luncheon. The month's Honored Elder was Teddy Simchen, who was blanketed and given a cedar hat.

The Easter Bunny even made a surprise appearance toward the end and took a trip around the room to take pictures.

In addition to the regular raffle of cash prizes, Elders were given a golden egg upon entering, which put them in the running for more giveaways. Twelve lucky winners were able to choose from the bonus golden egg prizes, which included a Bluetooth speaker, air fryer, cooler and more!

Mental health importance

By Joseph Earl, Chief Leschi '25

As a team-sport athlete, I have made many lifelong relationships with people who were complete strangers before our connection through sports. Relationships that become more than just on the field or on the court. Having healthy and comfortable relationships with teammates and coaches makes it easy to enjoy the game you love. Although, there are many athletes that end up quitting a sport because of the mental struggle they face. Before the COVID lockdown, I was a highly energetic person, with an approachable personality. In my eighth grade year, fresh out of the COVID lockdown, I faced a new challenge of social anxiety due to little to no in-person interaction. This new trait of mine made it hard to lead as a quarterback and ultimately affected my performance levels. I knew it would be difficult to tell people that I had anxiety because I was always known as this "big-time football player" that is always smiling and happy. I thought people would laugh or find my anxiety as a joke, which led to more anxiety. In that same year, I was benched for the back-up quarterback. This lack of confidence continued throughout my ninth grade year as I was a decent quarterback on the C-squad. I continually made mental errors and missed plays that I know I was capable of making.

Fast forward to my sophomore year. I just transferred to the school that I always dreamed I'd play for as a kid – my Tribal school that all of my family and relatives attended. In football, I led the state in passing and rushing yards, and earned multiple recognitions, including WIAA Athlete of the Week. We ended the season with the best record in school history. In the winter, I'm starting games in basketball, making a huge difference from the year before. Winning the league championship was just a small step to where we ended. Making the State Championships was a dream come true, and although we didn't win, it was an honor to play on the biggest stage in the state. Trying a new sport can be quite intimidating, as I recently tried track for the first time. The same results are being produced. I made it to the state championships in multiple events, representing my school in front of the whole state.

I finally recovered. After surrounding myself with the teammates and coaches that boosted my confidence, I was able to recover from anxiety and the fear of failure. My sophomore year is the high school sports story that I will tell for the rest of my life. It describes the importance of mental health and how sports can help with more than just your physical health. People were telling me not to go to a 2B school. They said, "No colleges will look at you." Transferring schools could be the best thing that ever happened to me. I was able to find happiness in the sports that I love again. I enjoy being a student-athlete at this school surrounded by my peers that are Native American like me. From my view, I'd describe suffering from anxiety as a "loop" or "cycle" that repeats over and over again. My teammates made me feel like that captain I once was. And my coaches gave me that trust that I once had. All of this new confidence and positive aura made it possible to be a part of the WIAA Leap Committee and share experiences like this. As athletes, not valuing your mental health can be detrimental to your peak performance in your sport. It can also cause issues outside of sports. My advice to those suffering from mental health issues is to make the decisions that YOU believe are best for you. Don't allow anyone to dictate your decisions. Talk to someone who is willing to listen. Set goals that you can achieve. These are all small steps that you can take to expand your comfort zone. I am beyond grateful for the discipline, happiness, and relationships high school sports have given me. I wouldn't trade it for the world. I am excited to be a part of change for student-athletes all across the state.

A River of Healing

May is Mental Health Awareness Month

Mental health awareness is the continual effort to reduce stigmas around mental health by sharing stories and bringing awareness. There are often misconceptions about mental health, people often suffer in silence and never get help. In tribal communities the stigma, intergenerational trauma, and lack of awareness of culturally appropriate mental health treatment create barriers to individuals seeking and using services available. The effects of colonization on Indigenous peoples are associated with Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACE's), such as child abuse and or neglect and over two decades of research consistently demonstrates a moderate correlation between ACEs and a wide range of negative health and social outcomes. For our community to heal from the intergenerational trauma we must address our mental health and empower one another to heal. In order for our children to heal, we must heal ourselves.

Minority Mental Health Awareness Month

American Indians and Alaska Natives

Minority Mental Health Awareness Month brings awareness to the unique struggles that underrepresented groups face in regard to mental illness. This observance aims to improve access to mental health treatment and services for multicultural communities through increased public awareness.

FACTS:

American Indians and Alaska Natives report higher rates of posttraumatic stress disorder and alcohol dependence than any other ethnic or racial group. American Psychiatric Association

16%

In 2017, 13.3% of youth ages 12-17 had at least one depressive episode, but that number was higher among American Indian and Alaska Native youth at 16.3%. Dept. of Health and Human Services Office of Minority Health

21%

In 2014, approximately 21% of American Indian and Alaska Natives ages 18+ reported past-year mental illness, compared with 17.9% for the general population. American Psychiatric Association

American Indian and Alaska Native children and adolescents have the highest rates of lifetime major depressive episodes and self-reported depression than any other ethnic or racial group. American Psychiatric Association

High rates of substance use disorders, posttraumatic stress disorder, suicide, and attachment disorders in many American Indian and Alaska Native communities have been directly linked to the intergenerational historical trauma forced upon them, such as forced removal off their land. American Psychiatric Association

BARRIERS TO MENTAL HEALTH CARE:

- Economic barriers (cost, lack of insurance)
- Lack of awareness about mental health and available services
- Stigma associated with mental illness
- Lack of culturally sensitive mental health services
- Mistrust of health care providers
- Lack of appropriate intervention strategies (including integration of mental health and primary health care services)

Build Your Toolkit for Mental Health Month

May is Mental Health Month. If you or someone you know is going through a difficult period of mental health, you are not alone. Around 827,000 American Indian/Alaska Natives will be diagnosed with a mental health condition this year. Sometimes, mental health conditions are not as noticeable as a broken leg or an ear infection, but it's important to remember that mental health is equally as important as physical health.

Everyone goes through periods of difficulty and stress, so it's important to take care of yourself. Here are some tools you can keep near to use when times get tough.

Reach for a Mood Booster: Watching a funny video, taking a walk, or playing with a pet can improve your mood when you are feeling down. Taking time for things you enjoy is important.

Address Your Basic Needs: Eat a healthy snack, drink a glass of water, take a shower or bath, or get some rest. If your basic needs are met, you can be in a better space to handle difficulties.

Do Something for Someone Else: Do something nice for someone you know, or even a stranger. Helping someone else can boost your mood and can sometimes give perspective when times are tough.

Ask for Help: Reach out to a friend or family member and ask them to talk with you or just sit and hold space with you.

Connecting with others is a helpful way to recenter when you are feeling down. If you can't reach anyone or don't feel like you can share your troubles with someone you know, you can always call or text 988 and press 4 to reach the Native and Strong Lifeline. Calls are answered by Native crisis counselors who are closely tied to their communities. The Native and Strong Lifeline counselors are fully trained in crisis intervention and support, with special emphasis on cultural and traditional practices related to healing.

Throughout May, we will be wearing green during the month to "Be Seen In Green" in support of reducing the stigma around mental health and reminding everyone that 1 in 5 people in the U.S. experience some type of short-term or long-term diagnosable mental health condition each year. Take a look at our Facebook and/or Instagram page to see us in green!

Tribe hosts GONA Spring Break Camp

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

Dozens of people from the Puyallup Tribal community, including Tribal youth, took part in the three-day Gathering of Native Americans Spring Break Camp (GONA) at Winners Gym from April 8 to 10.

The three-day camp was organized by the Culture Department and aims to strengthen Native American identity and culture through teachings of four Indigenous themes: belonging, mastery, interdependence and generosity.

The first day of the camp covered belonging and mastery, while the second day focused on interdependence. The theme of the final day was generosity.

Puyallup Tribal members Peggy McCloud and Ramona Bennett were among the speakers.

After having the chance to listen to the speakers each day, Tribal youth and their families were able to sit down and craft a variety of things, including keychains, magnets, salmon necklaces and more.

The Tribe purchased the gym and the former Tacoma Christian Center in 2022. The gym has given the Heritage Division a more spacious location for classes and other indoor events.

Tribe participates in Daffodil Festival 2024

By Ernest A. Jasmin, Puyallup Tribal News

The Puyallup Tribe was well represented at the 91st annual Daffodil Festival Grand Floral Parade, which kicked off in downtown Tacoma on the morning of April 6. Puyallup Tribal Councilman James Rideout served onlookers as grand marshal this year, and you may have also spotted Chief Leschi Daffodil Princess Taiah Mitchell, 2023 Daffodil Princess Kayliana Young, Tribal drummers and dancers and Elders waving from their award-winning float.

Blue Thunder Drumline members teach percussion skills to Chief Leschi students

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

Chief Leschi drumline instructors Heather Parks and Andrell Robinson had never heard of a music program that only focused on percussion until they got to the school, last year.

There were also no plans to add other instruments to the music program.

Both of those things immediately jumped out to Parks and Robinson, who are also members of the Seattle Seahawks Blue Thunder Drumline.

“A drumline that only has a percussion section and only wants a percussion section – that was the pitch to both of us, and we were both like, ‘Wait, that’s different,’” Parks said. “It was a clean slate, and they were telling us, ‘Hey, please do what you want, you’re the experts.’ That almost never happens as band directors.”

Having mostly taught percussion in private sessions before, Parks and Robinson said they had to make an adjustment to being in a classroom of middle and high schoolers.

“I’ve worked in some summer camps and things, but as far as the overall classroom environment goes, it’s definitely a different situation to tackle,” Robinson said.

Even with an adjustment period, Parks and Robinson both expressed how much fun it has been to teach the Tribal youth.

“It’s a job you go into where you don’t feel like you’re necessarily working,” Robinson said. “It’s fun to help set other people on a path.”

Parks said it feels like they’re just practicing every day.

“We’re showing them how to do it, but we also get to play, you know?” Parks said. “In that respect it does feel like more of a fun job than anything else, but also just teaching them shows us what we still don’t know and what we need to work on.”

Students Jada Mayer and Ahnika McKinney didn’t exactly sign up for the class, but being put into it has been a great experience. “It’s been fun to learn the basics,” Mayer said.

McKinney said the best parts of the program have been being able to learn and put together a new song. “For me, it’s just playing and learning songs,” McKinney said.

And while drumming is a large part of Tribal culture, Parks and Robinson said they know the two styles are different, and cultural drumming isn’t in their wheelhouse, but that hasn’t stopped students from merging the two.

“The kids have come in here and played circle songs on these drums, sang and had fun, and we’re cool with that, but that’s not our expertise,” Parks said. “We kind of try to stay, respectfully, away.”

Students in the drumline program can be seen performing at school events such as assemblies, football games and celebrations.

Ramona Bennett sheds light on historic protests at Boldt event

By Ernest A. Jasmin, Puyallup Tribal News

The Washington State History Museum hosted “Symposium: The Boldt Decision at 50” on March 30, examining the legacy of U.S. District Court Judge George Boldt’s historic 1974 ruling of U.S. vs. Washington that re-affirmed Tribal treaty fishing rights.

Author John C. Hughes delivered keynote remarks, discussing his book “Lightning Boldt: Judge George H. Boldt and a Defining Moment in Tribal Sovereignty” and, at one point, the Puyallup Tribe’s Ramona Bennett, who was in attendance.

Bennett is known for her activism during the Fish Wars protests that led up to the Boldt Decision and for serving as Puyallup Tribal Council Chairwoman during the 1970s. She also spoke at the symposium, joining Nisqually Tribal Council Chairman Willie Frank III, former Squaxin Island Tribe Councilman Jim Peters and Gonzaga University Professor Laurie Arnold for a lively panel discussion in the museum’s 220-seat auditorium.

At one point, Bennett alluded to having written a memoir, as she did last summer at the Tacoma Dome during her City of Destiny Awards Lifetime Achievement acceptance speech. “It’s about all of this,” she explained, “and it goes back to 100 years of deprivation of recognized fishing rights.”

Former Puyallup Tribal Council Chairwoman Ramona Bennett shares the stage with Nisqually Tribal Council Chairman Willie Frank III at the Washington Historical Society’s event “Symposium: The Boldt Decision at 50” on March 30. Frank gifted a paddle to Boldt’s relatives.

She recalled a time before Boldt when there were few economic opportunities for Natives in the region, and many had to rely on fishing just to eat. “They were shoved off the rivers by the white law enforcement people and vigilantes,” she said. “It was harsh, it was cruel and Indian families were really struggling to survive. There was a new economy, but there was no place in it for Indians.”

The Boldt Decision is considered a pivotal moment in the struggle for Native fishing rights and Tribal sovereignty. Bennett put into context how shocking the ruling was at the time.

“You can imagine having the bottom beat out of your canoe and your net slashed and being dragged off to jail in front of your children,” she said. “When the Boldt Decision happened, all of the sudden the government was saying, ‘Come on in. We’re going to co-manage (fisheries.)’ What ... is going on? Are these people just insane?”

Members of Boldt’s family were present, and Frank presented them with a paddle at the end of the session.

Panelists also shared stories about the Nisqually chairman’s father, Billy Frank, Jr., who became a key voice in the fight to recognize Native fishing rights and Tribal sovereignty. He will be honored with a statue to be placed in the U.S. Capitol’s National Statuary Hall, the first Native American to receive this honor.

“He was the person that had the charisma, the knowledge, the history ... and he could just get along with anyone,” Bennett recalled. “Nobody else could have done the job he did. He was magic. The guy was just a miracle.”

Many who attended the symposium also viewed the Washington State History Museum’s related exhibit, “The Treaty of Medicine Creek.” Boldt’s decision regarding U.S. v. Washington would have been informed by the 1854 treaty, a page of which is on display at the museum through July 8. Visit www.washingtonhistory.org to learn more.

Members of the Puyallup Tribe come together for a culture day assembly

By Puyallup Tribal News Staff

March 29 was a day to remember at Lincoln High School. The gym was filled with students and faculty who came together for a culture day assembly to celebrate the many cultures that make up the school. The assembly kicked off with members of the Puyallup Tribe coming together to do a Land Acknowledgment honoring the rich heritage of the Puyallup People. Traditional song and dance filled the gym; it set the tone for a day of unity and appreciation for all the diverse cultures.

Culture Department holds Canoe Awakening

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

Members of the Tribal community gathered in the Admin building parking lot on April 5 to celebrate this year's Canoe Awakening.

Cultural Center Assistant Director Clinton McCloud led the ceremony, calling witnesses and taking part in drumming and singing, while dancers brushed cedar across two canoes, getting them ready for the water this spring and summer.

Traditionally, the Tribe's canoes were never put away as they were the primary method of transportation, but today, they're stored for the winter.

"Our spiritual Elders always talked about our canoes having their own spirit and that they're alive," McCloud said. "We have the song and dance that says we're brushing anything off that may have been collected on this canoe while it wasn't being used. We're just brushing off anything that doesn't need to be there, and with the songs and dances we're putting in our goodness with prayers, love and protection for the travels of the people that are using the canoe."

Rapper Ludacris serves up the hits at EQC Event Center

By Ernest A. Jasmin, Puyallup Tribal News

Fresh from hosting the iHeartRadio Music Awards and performing during the Super Bowl halftime show, hip-hop hit maker Chris "Ludacris" Bridges headlined the Puyallup Tribe's EQC Events Center on April 4.

Backed by hype man Lil Fate and DJ Infamous, Luda seemed to pack all of his smash singles into a tight hour and change: "Welcome to Atlanta," "Area Codes," "My Chick Bad," "Stand Up,"

"Money Maker" and more, all the way back to "What's Your Fantasy," the cut that launched his prolific music and film career 25 years ago. The rapper showed lots of love to the fans from Seattle and "Glaucoma Tacoma" (had to be there) claiming this is his second strongest market behind his hometown of Atlanta.

Teddy Simchen recognized as Honored Elder for March

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

A senior Puyallup Tribal member is recognized as the Honored Elder each month at the Elders Luncheon.

Teddy Simchen became the latest Puyallup Tribal Elder to be honored on March 22 as he was blanketed by Puyallup Tribal Council members Anna Bean and Monica Miller. Simchen also received a cedar hat and will have his photo placed on the wall at House of Respect along with other Honored Elders from the past.

Each Honored Elder also records a video in which they talk about their lives and experiences. Here is Simchen's story in his own words.

"My name is Teddy Warren Simchen. My first name and middle name are both named after presidents: Teddy Roosevelt and Warren Harding.

"I was born and raised out in Fife, Washington, on a nice, snowing Nov. 19, 1951.

"My mom and dad were married after the war, and I am the middle of five kids. My oldest brothers, Ron and Jay, have both been honored. My younger brother, David, is deceased. My little sister, Laura, has not been honored yet. She's still in her 60s.

I remember the days when you couldn't buy beer on Sundays (and when) Indians were not allowed in bars.

"My grandmother, mom, aunt and great uncle all lived on a family allotment out by the Firwood Tavern that had a hand water pump and an outhouse.

"They moved to Tacoma so my aunt and mother could go to high school and junior high. Back in the '30s is probably when they moved into town.

"My Tribal history starts way back to the signing of the Medicine Creek Treaty. I don't know how many greats, but I had a great-great-great-grandfather that signed the Medicine Creek Treaty and a great-great-great-uncle that signed the Medicine Creek Treaty.

"My great-great-great-grand uncle was one of the first Puyallup Tribal members taken down to the Oregon boarding school. They didn't even have the barracks built. They had to build their own barracks to stay in.

He was the Indian superintendent of the school until he passed away in 1907.

"My great grandmother and great uncle both went there. They both ended up going to the University of Oregon and both have college degrees. Unfortunately, back in those days, an Indian with a college degree didn't mean anything. My grandmother worked housekeeping at the Cushman Hospital, my great uncle worked in the steam plant laundry and that's what they did with college degrees and the only jobs they could get.

"I was in the U.S. Army from 1969 to 1972. I'm a Vietnam era veteran, and I proudly carry our colors in various parades and various powwows when we are asked with the other veterans from the Tribe. Most of time I spent in Germany, the states and I was up in Alaska. I got to see the midnight sun, 24 hours of darkness, 24 hours of day and 20-foot snowbanks.

"My initial (Military Occupational Specialty), I was a combat engineer and then I changed over, took some schooling, and I was a field and track vehicle mechanic. When I got out of the service, I used my GI Bill, and for a while I went to diesel mechanic school in Spokane.

"In the military, I ended up losing my identity, and I ended up becoming an alcoholic (and) drug addict. My family had moved over to Eastern Washington by then, and I stayed in Eastern Washington from the time I had gotten out of the service in '72. I started coming back around (to Tacoma) in the '70s, but I didn't move back over until it was the 1980s. I got to go to our own Puyallup Tribal treatment center not once, but twice.

"I worked under (Puyallup Tribal Council Vice Chairwoman) Sylvia Miller in the JPTA (Job Training Partnership Act) program.

I helped people prep for getting GEDs and basic day-to-day skills for our Tribal members who didn't go to school very long.

"Speaking of school, I only completed the ninth grade. After completing the ninth grade, I ended up taking the GED and passing it, and I do have some college.

"I started working out at the school as security. Actually, before the school had security, I worked for the construction company, and I was a gate guard. From there, I transferred to school security, and then I transitioned to the casino security. From casino security, I went back and worked for the Tribe as a gaming agent, overseeing the protection of the casino assets.

"I come from a strong family that has represented the Tribe on Council starting with my grandmother (Ruth Denny LaFleur), who in the 50s, was actually our Tribal Chairman for a while. My mom (Augusta Denny Simchen) was on Council and my aunt (Jacqueline Denny Stiltner) was on Council for various lengths of time back when we had less than 700 Tribal members and Council did not get paid.

"Even when we didn't have a lot of Tribal members, we would still have Tribal dinners down in the basement of the Presbyterian church over here in our graveyard. They would be well attended by a lot of the Tribal members. Today, we've grown to where we have a house and residence for our Elders. We have an inpatient facility, and we have monthly Elders luncheons that are well attended. "Don't rely on just your per cap. Learn a trade, learn a job and go to work."

Chief Leschi Daffodil Princess Taiah Mitchell enjoying her time in Royal Court

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

The 91st annual Daffodil Festival Parade took place on April 6, and representing Chief Leschi High School and the Puyallup Tribal Community in the parade was senior Taiah Mitchell.

Mitchell was selected as the school's Daffodil Princess in October after a multi-step selection process that included an interview with the school's judges and a formal selection ceremony.

The Daffodil Royal Court also takes part in various events around Pierce County, such as the Princess Promenade, Queen's Coronation, Festival Auction and more. A full list of events can be found at www.thedaffodilfestival.org/events.

Mitchell joined the rest of the Daffodil Royal Court on a parade float that started in downtown Tacoma before cruising through Puyallup, Sumner and Orting.

Before Mitchell took part in the parade, she sat down for an interview about what it means to her to be named Chief Leschi's representative in the parade.

What made you want to pursue running for Daffodil Princess at Chief Leschi?

What made me want to be the Daffodil Princess for my school was to show all the younger kids it's possible to (do this). It means a lot to me to be able to set a good example. Also, to my younger self, I always watched the Daffodil Festival roll by at the parade as the Tribe's float would be waiting to go. It always warmed me inside knowing I could one day be in their position.

What does it mean to you to have been selected?

This means so much to me! I have always dreamed about being a part of the festival. It is truly a dream come true.

What are your goals as Daffodil Princess and representing Chief Leschi during your time in the role?

One of my goals is to get the younger kids more involved so they can look up to it someday as well for them. Also, another goal is for myself. I think this is a great experience for myself to grow and help myself become the woman who I want to be one day!

What has the experience of being Daffodil Princess been like for you?

The Daffodil Princess experience has been great! I think it will pick up more as the parades and other events start to pick up more, but, so far, it has been a great learning and growing experience!

How meaningful is it for you to also represent the Puyallup Tribal community in your role?

Having this opportunity to represent the Tribe and my community is huge. I try not to forget that they are always willing to help and be there for me. Thinking about it, it's a big way to represent the Tribe and my people. (It) means a lot knowing I am able to do this.

I have enjoyed every moment with my Daffodil court, and I look forward to being on the float at the Grand Floral Parade April 6 as we travel through all four cities in one day. I look forward to seeing my community there!

Tribal father names scholarship after son who died in 2021 crash

By Ernest A. Jasmin, Puyallup Tribal News

Puyallup Tribal member Frank Earl lost his teenage son to a violent car crash three years ago. Now, he hopes a scholarship bearing his son's name will help other Puyallup youth reach their full potential and possibly save lives.

Ta-Mi-U-Sun Earl was just 16 on March 31, 2021, the day he was riding in a car traveling on Pioneer Way East near Puyallup. As KIRO 7 reported, the car's driver was speeding and clipped another vehicle before losing control and crashing into a telephone pole, resulting in Earl's death.

"Our message is to take your foot off the gas," Frank Earl said as he presented the student in the amount of $10,000 per year if funds are available.

His voice quivered with emotion during parts of his presentation. "I'm sorry," he said. "Just to talk of my son is painful for me."

To apply, students must submit their application along with a letter of recommendation by May 17. They must also have a grade point average of 2.8 or higher, enrollment verification from their college of choice and Tribal identification, descendent verification or a Certificate of Indian Blood.
